Many wonderful presenters are coming together between April 9th and 17th to provide informative classes and workshops to help us all improve our research skills. Whether you are just starting out or have researched for years there will be something of interest for all.

Admission to the GFO and to all the classes during the Open House is free—so tell your friends, your relatives, and anyone else who will listen.

One of the highlights of the week will be on Thursday, April 14, from 1–2 pm when Connie Lenzen will present “Put Your Ancestors in Their Place.” The geographical landscape where our ancestors resided shaped how they lived, where they went to market, whom they met and married, where they recorded land sales and marriages, and the location of their final resting place. When you know the location where your ancestors lived, you can find records, you can trace ancestors, you can understand how the people lived—you can walk in their shoes.

Anyone who has been to one of Connie’s classes knows what a great teacher she is, but we want to share this letter we received after Connie’s House History Workshop.

“Connie Lenzen’s ‘Discover Your House History’ today was an exciting and a wonderfully complete, well-organized presentation. I was especially impressed with how Connie took the time to visit the records division of each of Multnomah, Washington, and Clackamas Counties. Bravo for making that effort and for sharing tips about accessing information at each.

“It was also very impressive to learn how Connie researched properties, residential and commercial, in Multnomah County, and a residential property in Clackamas County, and then shared her findings with us.

“Finally, Connie’s class today was so much better, as well as above a similar workshop I attended several years ago presented by a different organization in Multnomah County: more information, more detail, more serious research tips, and so many examples of what can be learned on the Internet, and at various places including the GFO.

“I hope you will extend my heartfelt thanks for the many hours of research and organization Connie gave to today’s class. Thank you also for the GFO for hosting the event!”

Very sincerely,
Lisa Bentley, Oak Lodge History Detectives
Jennings Lodge Subcommittee Chair

Public Library Collections on Wikimedia Commons

Wikimedia Commons has digital files from several public library collections. The files include photos, maps, documents, letters, news clips, and more.

The more prominent collections are from the New York Public Library, especially thousands of stereoviews of towns, places, and events, Sanborn and other maps, sheet music of old popular songs.

Boston Public Library: Includes a selection of anti-slavery documents from the collections of several prominent abolitionists, photographs, political cartoons from the 18th century, hundreds of maps and postcards of every state.

Libraries contributing material include: Kalama-zoo, Tacoma, Toronto, Ontario, John F. Kennedy Presidential Library, Vancouver (British Columbia), University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and many more.

Search on “public library collection” and the subject or name. Searching on “collection” may uncover other institutional materials.

Membership Special During GFO Open House

The GFO is offering a Membership Special during the GFO Open House, which runs from April 9 to 17.

Anyone who joins or renews at the library is eligible to receive 14 months of membership when they pay for 12. What a deal! All that is necessary is to come in to the library during the Open House, complete an application, and pay for the membership. Payment may be made in cash, with a check, or by using PayPal (https://www.paypal.com/home) designating payments@gfo.org as the recipient, and please add a note to indicate the payment is for membership. For those who do not have cash or a check with them, just complete the application while you are at the Library, leave it with the receptionist, ask for a return envelope to take home with you, and get your check in to us before the end of April to receive this great bargain.

This offer is only good for applications received in person at the Library; mailed applications will not receive this special offer. Payment is due by April 30 to complete the process.

Your Tip Here

Have a favorite tip that you want to share? Send to insider@gfo.org. You may make someone’s day.
Scanning Many Photos

When you have boxes of photos to scan, it can seem daunting to go through the process of place, preview scan, final scan, and save for each one. Here’s a simpler route - scan in batches. Lay out many photos on the scanning bed at once. Jiggle them around to fit closely, and make a preview scan.

There are two paths at this point: 1) On the preview scan, use the selection box to isolate each photo in turn, do a final scan, save them separately; or 2) do a final scan on the whole bed, then open that file in a photo editing software and crop and save it once for each separate photo. Remember to not overwrite your large scan file.

The photos on the bed are only scanned once for preview, so you save time. This technique works best if your photos will all be scanned with a common setting (resolution, color/black-white, filters, etc.), so arrange them accordingly.

Getting Started: Thrift Shop Genealogy

Working on a shoestring budget? Here's a list of ideas for what you can find in a thrift store to begin your research: tools, supplies, maybe even family items.

Research Stories

Every one of you has a story to tell: of great successes, and small ones; of step-by-step slogging, and of brick walls the size of Hadrian’s. We want to inspire and give ideas to other genealogists by adding those stories to the GFO newsletter. Whether it’s a favorite technique, an unexpected find, a resource, or a person who helped your search; consider writing it up for the Insider newsletter.

The format is simple: Write in an informal style, up to 350 words (fewer if you want to include a photo) and submit to insider@gfo.org. The item should not have been published previously. If you’d like to see examples, the May 2014 newsletter has two of them. If we select it, we may edit for clarity and space.

Avoid Forever Losing Your USB Drives

Jane McGarvin

More than once while at research facilities, I have left my USB thumb drive in a computer, but generally have been lucky that someone turned it in, and I was able to retrieve it. However, it would be a lot easier to identify if a file was created on the USB drive to identify me as the owner.

While at the Family History Center in Salt Lake City in December, I was referred to Brother David Hanson who teaches staff as well as researchers. He shared several tips after noticing my USB drive had not yet been named, one of which was creating a folder and document on your thumb drive with your contact information.

Instructions

Note: these instructions are specific to the Windows operating system. Similar capabilities exist for other systems.

1. Open Windows Explorer or equivalent file management software on your computer. The flash drive under “Removable Storage” (here as Drive H) hasn’t been named. It may be listed simply as USB (H), or possibly the drive manufacturer’s name (Lexar here).

2. Right-click on the USB drive name to access the command menu, then select Rename.

3. A blue box will appear—start typing in the new name for the flash drive. The maximum number of characters is 11; longer names will not be accepted. David noted he usually uses his first initial and last name. Accepted characters are alphabetic, numeric, hypens, and underscores. It will always be named in capital letters - even if you type upper- and lower-case letters.

4. Now that your flash drive is named, the next step is to create a folder and file with your contact information such as your phone number and/or email address, so that if someone finds your flash drive, they can get the flash drive back to you.

5. In the folder management window, double left-click on your flash drive and create a new folder called “1_If_this_flash_drive_is_LOST.” By putting a ‘1’ in front of the name of the folder, it will always be the folder listed at the top of the screen when the flash drive is opened.

6. Create an ASCII-text document, also known as a plain text document, in the above folder with your contact information in it—listing two or more methods (phone numbers, email, etc.) will give the finder more contact options. (While the original instructions suggested a Word document, an ASCII-text file is a better choice; it will open on any system. Notepad in Windows, and TextSimple in Mac systems are two programs that will create these types of files.)

7. Now check to see if everything worked properly.
   • Open the file management window.
   • Double-click on the name of your flash drive, then on the text document to open it.
   • Close all open windows and you are done.

8. Here is an example of how it should look in the folder:

This process would also work on other devices such as laptop computers, IPads, and possibly cell phones. Used with permission and thanks to Brother David Hanson, Family History Library, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Volunteer Power!

It’s amazing what a group of people can accomplish in a short time, when they come together with a single goal. At a recent Sunday morning work party, a shout-out from the Wednesday email news brought in 17 volunteers. Within the short session, they had sorted 30 boxes of periodicals. Some even remained after and labelled books. We love our volunteers! We gave each a free pass to GFO for themself or a friend.

Want to join us? Every Sunday morning from 9 am–12 pm, we tackle various collections and book tasks. Come for even an hour, we can use any help. Contact Cathy Lauer at volunteer@gfo.org if you’d like more information.

March: The Bulletin Proofreaders

This dedicated team of volunteers reviews every article in the Bulletin, not once but twice before it goes to print or is distributed electronically. Diligently, they go over the articles with a fine-tooth comb to expose all the “nits” they can find. The Bulletin would not be what it is without them!”

April: Tracy Bruckner

In addition to working the RA shift on Wednesday evenings, Tracy faithfully assists the Library Committee by stamping and labeling books, books, and MORE books. She can successfully empty an entire cart in an evening—and her accuracy and attention to detail is so appreciated as she catches the occasional cataloging error. Thank you Tracy!
Volunteer Opportunities

Just a few hours of your time and a willingness to help can make a BIG difference.

Proof Readers Wanted

The GFO does not have a complete Bulletin index for publications from 1951 through the current issues. We are recruiting volunteers to compile indexes that will eventually be placed on our website. Six years have been completed so far. We need someone to proof the other completed issues and any further issues as they are finished. Can you help? Contact Cathy Lauer at volunteer@gfo.org.

Recruiting Research Assistants

We especially need people for Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons from 1–5 pm. If you know the basics of doing genealogy research, know the basics of using a computer, and how to answer the telephone, then you are a perfect match for the job. Training is hands-on and you would be working with another experienced person to help you.

Please consider giving one day per week or every other week, or even once a month. Contact Cathy Lauer at volunteer@gfo.org.

Book Reviewers Wanted

Missing Entries in City Directories

In the front of many city directories, there are features that supplement the usual name and business address listings. One section explains why some names are not included. If you’re expecting to find a particular name, and none is found, check the front sections for some possible reasons:

- Names of persons or businesses that were refused for the book, sometimes listed by address.
- Names that were added, corrected, or removed late in the publishing process and are not in the alphabetized sections.
- Notes on street name changes and how they’re handled in addresses. The name may be there, but the address is different. They family may not have moved - it may be simply that the streets have been renamed and renumbered. A look at contemporary maps can confirm the locations for each entry.

Seventh-day Adventist Obituaries

A note on a resource from long-time GFO member Sam Butler passed on by Gerry Lenzen:

“In the past, since some of my ancestors and second cousins included members of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, I would search North Pacific Union Gleaner, a monthly magazine that they published in the Portland area that included obituaries of members. Issues started in 1906 and continued through 1995.

Imagine my pleasure when I discovered that they had digitized all issues and placed them online, viewable in PDF formats.”

The Writers’ Forum – April

Saturday, April 9, 1-3 pm

The Writers’ Forum will welcome a speaker to talk to us about publishing a memoir. These same principles could be applied to any kind of genealogical writing you might want to publish.

Publishing The Memoir: Everything You Need to Know

• What do you need to publish your book?
• How much will it cost you?
• How to avoid scams.
• How to reach readers today.

Our presenter, Mary Rosenblum, is a self-supporting award-winning New York author. She has spent more than a decade teaching writing and helping writers publish and promote safely and effectively in today’s exciting new world of publishing. Her motto is “no paying scammers.”

Introduction to Scrivener

During the April meeting, we will also be talking about using the software Scrivener to organize your genealogical writing projects. Scrivener helps you put all your research and information in one place for easy access while you write, and also helps you divide your writing into manageable chunks. Bring a writing project idea and we’ll talk about how to organize it to begin working with Scrivener.

The Writers’ Forum – May

Saturday, May 14, 1-3 pm

This will be a working session with Scrivener software. Scrivener is available for Mac and Windows as a download (https://www.literatureandlatte.com/scrivener.php) and offers a 30 day free trial. Bring a writing project and your laptop loaded with Scrivener. Help will be provided, but feel free to play with Scrivener before you come.
